What to Expect at your Sales Consultation Appointment ...

Your Sales Session will take place in our purpose designed Preview / consultation room, Sales consultations typically last for approx 1hr, when you arrive at the studio the first thing for us is that we get you a cup of tea/coffee or soft drink and you can then get comfortable on the sofa ready for your Sales session to begin.

It is important that all decision makers are present at the Sales Consultation, It is also advisable if possible that children do not attend the Sales session , you will want to concentrate on the decision of what images you would like to purchase and this can get difficult as children can get bored quite quickly and demand your attention. However we understand that sometimes this may not be possible, so we do have some colouring books and toys to keep the kids entertained if necessary.

Your Sales Consultation session will begin with a slide-show set to music showing your images from your portrait session on our 70" Cinematic projector screen, we do have tissues at the ready as this part can sometimes get quite emotional

After the slide-show we then get down to the fun part, this is where you can go through and pick your favourite images . After which we will then show you through all the possibilities available for your final finished portraits.

Who & Where to buy for (a little reminder)

Having a professional portrait isn't just about great photographs, think of them as your very own works of art, created for you , cherished by you , enjoyed by everyone you know family, friends neighbours etc.

Have you thought about how and where to display your very own works of art?

The most popular area to display your finished portraits is as a large frame or collection of frames on your living or dining room wall, after all this is normally where you spend the most time as a family, this is where you and your family will get the most enjoyment from your portrait.

For portraits that are to go on to a wall we recommend a minimum size of 24" on the longest side, that way you will be able to enjoy the portrait whilst sitting anywhere in the room, at this size the portrait is large enough to enjoy the expressions and joy of the portrait without having to stand right in front of it !! Portraits this size become a focal point to the room, it's also a great way to display your portrait as it becomes a talking point for visitors and relatives that come to your home.

Another area to consider would be the entrance hall if you have one, a wall portrait here welcomes anyone who visits your home, depending on the size of your hallway a smaller framed portrait or canvas/acrylic is usually sufficient.

Other rooms to consider for your portraits would be the bedroom, perhaps you have a games room, a kids play room, if its a baby session you have had why not display some wall portraits in the nursery? The choice is yours...

Why not have a look around your home now, where do you think your portraits will look there best...Have a look at an area you would like to display your portraits and measure the wall space (you can write it down below) this will help you and me at the preview session if choosing a portrait size for that area .

Living Room (above the sofa / fireplace)	Width.....inches	Height.....inches
Dining Room	Width.....inches	Height.....inches
Hallway	Width.....inches	Height.....inches
Bedroom / Games room / Nursery e.t.c	Width.....inches	Height.....inches

Another important thing to consider is who to purchase your portraits for.. Obviously the main person you invest in your portraits for is yourself, husband, wife, partner, children. Hence a wall portrait or album is the perfect choice, but what about grandparents, uncles & aunties, friends ?

It would be nice to share your portraits with them wouldn't it?

Perhaps you may like to purchase one of our desktop portraits, ideal for the office desk at work, or as a gift for grandparents.

There are many possibilities for your portraits, now is the perfect opportunity to have a think about who and where you would like to purchase them for, that way you'll be better prepared for your preview session and ensure nowhere or no one gets forgotten :)
